GENERAL STATEMENT

History and Location The School of Law was established at Loyola University by the Jesuits in October 1914. The first faculty was organized by the Honorable John St. Paul, then Judge of the Court of Appeal for the Parish of Orleans, and later an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Louisiana. Classes were held at night in Alumni Hall of the old College of the Immaculate Conception in downtown New Orleans. After the first year and until 1931, the School of Law was housed in Marquette Hall, on the campus of Loyola University. The day division was organized in 1925. In 1931 the School was moved to the ground floor of Bobet Hall, which was occupied until June, 1941. From September, 1941, until May, 1942, classes were held in a building on Marquette Place formerly known as "Biever Hall". Since May, 1942, classes have been held in Thomas More Hall at 6333 St. Charles Avenue.

Objectives To develop future members of the bar who, in addition to being expertly trained in legal knowledge and procedure, are possessed of a philosophy of law enabling them in the highest sense of the word to become a credit to themselves, to their profession, to their country and to their God—this is the objective of Loyola's School of Law.

Since law is concerned with man and the society made up of men, a philosophy of law has meaning in the exact degree in which it reflects a valid philosophy of man and of society. It is the contention of Loyola University's School of Law that there is only one valid philosophy of man, namely, a philosophy which considers man a creature, made by God, made for God and going back to God and that man's creation by God as a rational being is the unique source of the dignity of man, the supreme value of the individual, the sanctity of the human person, and of inalienable rights. A denial of this philosophy is tantamount to reducing man to the level of a highly developed animal and of founding the ultima ratio of law on physical force—the germinal idea of all totalitarian systems of government. The acceptance of man as a creature of God destined for life beyond the grave is the corner stone upon which Loyola builds its philosophy of law. Man, endowed as he is, with intellect and free will, is to be directed not by the physical law of lesser creatures, but the objective moral law to which he is bound in conscience to conform.

The principles defining what is morally good and morally bad in human activity are promulgated and sanctioned by the natural law as the expression in rational nature of God's design for man. In virtue of the natural law man is vested with certain rights and obligations. These rights and obligations are every man's endowment in virtue of his very nature; they are beyond the reach of men and government. It is the high purpose of human law to protect the right of each by assuring the reign of justice for all. Therefore, human law cannot be exempted from the directive influence of the natural law without in varying degree exposing the juridical process to the arbitrary will of men—this is the sole basis of a just and sound legal system. Thus human law is valid law only to the extent that it reflects directly or indirectly the dictates of the natural law.

It must be noted, however, that while in its principles the natural law is inflexible and absolute, the applications of these principles can and do vary according to the concrete circumstances of time and place. It is for this reason that Loyola's School of Law accepts without qualification the following observation of Rev. William J. Kenealy, S.J., formerly Dean of the Boston College School of Law: [from The Majesty of the Law, 5 Loyola L. Rev. 101, 114 (1950)]

The construction and maintenance of a corpus juris implementing the natural law is a perpetual and monumental task demanding the constant devotion of the best brains and the most mature scholarship of the legal profession. For the fundamental principles of the natural law, universal and immutable as the human nature from which they derive, require rational application to the constantly changing political, economic and social conditions of civil society. The application of the natural law postulates change as the circumstances of human existence change. It repudiates a naive and smug complacency in the status quo. It demands a reasoned acceptance of the good, and a rejection of the bad, in all that is new. It commands a critical search for the better. It directs an exhaustive search into all the available data of history, politics, economics, sociology, psychology, philosophy, and every other pertinent font of human knowledge. And, of primary importance, it insists that the constant search for a better corpus juris be made in the light of the origin, nature, purpose and limitations of the state; and in the knowledge of the origin, nature, dignity and destiny of man. This traditional American philosophy of law is opposed today, even within the legal profession, by the philosophies of positivism, pragmatism, realism and utilitarianism—all of which have an ideological common denominator in subjectivism, and none of which can offer an adequate reply to the destructive philosophy of totalitarianism.

The members of the faculty in the School of Law are deeply conscious of their responsibility to the student body. They are vitally aware that the profession demands very much more from a lawyer than mere legal learning. Because of this awareness the faculty wholeheartedly accepts natural law philosophy as the integrating factor in the entire law school curriculum.

For students entering the School of Law (with or without advanced standing) for the first time in the fall semester of 1969 and thereafter the requirement for that degree is eighty-four semester hours.

Approved School The School of Law is a member of the Association of American Law Schools and is approved by the American Bar Association, which approval is dependent upon meeting and maintaining certain standards as to entrance requirements, faculty, library, and curriculum. The School of Law is also registered as an approved school by the Board of Regents of the University of the State of New York.

Courses of Study The tradition of the civil law is a strong influence in Louisiana. Much of the curriculum in the School of Law is planned for the Louisiana Civil Code and the Code of Civil Procedure. Nevertheless, the American case-law technique is emphasized. Basic work is offered in jurisprudence and legal theory. The faculty has made available a selection of common law courses sufficient to permit students from states other than Louisiana to study at Loyola in preparation for practice in their home states.

Law Library The Loyola Law Library, located in the law building, is a basic working tool for today's law students, as well as a repository of research materials for the scholar. Its 34,000 volumes include reports of all federal courts and of all final and most intermediate appellate courts of the fifty States, as well as reports of England and France. The complete National Reporter System and the various annotated reporters are also available, as are annotated statutes of the United States, and publications of administrative agencies. Holdings include Shepard's citators for the entire National Reporter System, the American Digest System, leading state, federal and English digests, the leading legal periodicals and indices, a representative collection of texts and treatises in law and allied fields, and general, special legal encyclopediae of England, France and this country. The law library is a depository of selected United States and State of Louisiana documents. The general University library is conveniently located near the School of Law.

The law library of Chief Justice Douglass Edward White, which was donated to the School of Law, together with gifts of numerous volumes from Branch Knox Miller, Judge Charles Parlange, Judge John St. Paul, Rev. Jerome Mullin, S.J., J. M. Lepeyre, T. J. Semmes, W. C. Staub, Edward K. Wunderlich, Charles T. Soniat, and other donors, form a part of the collection.

In addition to the general law collection, the library maintains a special Civil Law collection containing one of the most complete groups of French authorities in the State, together with Roman, Spanish, Swiss and other national legal literature. Other units are a valuable collection of editions of Louisiana codes, and an international law section enriched by having been a depository of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

The faculty and students of the School of Law wish to acknowledge with sincerest gratitude the various donations made by Miss Leonora Del Bondio to the School of Law, which made it possible to improve its facilities and equipment.

Student Organizations The Delta Theta Phi national legal fraternity, has established a chapter at the School of Law, to which law students are eligible for membership. The fraternity is devoted to the stimulation of interest in scholarship, organized legal research and writing, participation in appellate court competition and fellowship on the part of its members. It presents a scholarship key to each member in the top fifteen per centum of the senior class and the top seven per centum of the junior class.

The Phi Delta Delta international women's legal fraternity, has established a chapter at the School of Law, to which women law students who meet established scholastic standards are eligible for membership.

The Phi Alpha Delta national legal fraternity has established a chapter at the School of Law to which any male law student is eligible for membership. The fraternity's purpose is to serve the law student by stressing a proper blend of professional and social activity to prepare him for the practice of law, to serve the law school by supplementing the formal courses with an orientation program for first year students, lectures, interschool moot court competition and other pre-professional endeavors to fulfill its motto "Service to the Student, the Law School, and the Profession".

The St. Thomas More Law Club was established in 1935 by the students of the day division, and all law students are eligible for membership. The law club, under the patronage of the English martyr and saint, is devoted to the stimulation of interest in organized legal research on the part of its membership, and in the preparation and argument of mooted cases before appellate tribunals. It annually sponsors the Natural Law Institute.

The Student Bar Association was organized in the Spring of 1952 and is comprised of all students enrolled in the day and evening divisions of the law school. It is governed under a constitution adopted by the students. Its purpose is to provide a means of closer unity among all students and to foster mutual cooperation and understanding between the law student body, the law faculty and the legal profession. The Student Bar Association of Loyola is a member of the Law Student Division of The American Bar Association.

In the Fall of 1960 the Legal Rag was established under the auspices of the Student Bar Association. A periodical publication, it is dedicated to the reporting of law school news and providing a medium for the expression of student views.

Membership dues in the Student Bar Association is $18.00 for full-time students payable at registration of the freshman year but covering all three years of law school. Dues for the part-time students is $5.00 paid annually at registration.

The Student Body of the School of Law is represented by a president and class representatives on the University Student Council.

Law Review The faculty and students of the School of Law publish the Loyola Law Review. Through this medium all upper-classmen are afforded opportunities for legal research and writing. The officers of the student board are chosen from the high-ranking students of the senior class who have previously demonstrated an interest in legal writing.

Legal Aid Program In cooperation with the Legal Aid Bureau of New Orleans upper-classmen in the School of Law are afforded the opportunity to assist in the handling of criminal and civil cases in which the Bureau is authorized to act. Students work under the supervision of the staff attorneys. The experience acquired in interviewing clients, in engaging in legal research, in conducting investigations and in drafting legal documents and pleadings is of much value as a supplement to the education of the student and beneficial to the community.

Lectures THE EDWARD RIGHTOR LECTURES. The Grand Lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the United States of America have established and funded a foundation to provide funds for periodic lectures in the School of Law in memory of Edward Rightor. Mr. Rightor was a Past Exalted Ruler of the Grand Lodge and for many years was a member of the part-time teaching staff of the School of Law. The lectures in law and related subjects are to be presented on a periodic basis.

Requirements For Admission Applicants for admission to the School of Law must be of good character. They must have completed their eighteenth year at the time of registration. The minimum prerequisites for admission to law school are fixed by the standards of the Association of American Law Schools and the American Bar Association. Applicants to the School of Law must meet a three-year minimum requirement; they must present satisfactory proof that they have completed "at least three-fourths of the work acceptable for a bachelor's degree after four years of study at a principal college or university in the state where the law school is located, with a scholastic average, based on all work undertaken, at least equal to the quality of work required for graduation in the institutions attended."

Every applicant must take the Law School Admission Test administered by the Educational Testing Service. Applications to take the test must be made direct to the Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, New Jersey. No application will be considered unless the score obtained has been submitted.

Application Procedure An applicant for admission to the School of Law must: (1) Execute an application form obtained from the School of Law and file it together with an application fee of $10.00, payable to Loyola University with the Director of Admissions, School of Law.

(2) Have Educational Testing Service report his (her) Law School Admission Test score to the School of Law.

(3) Have a transcript sent directly to the Director of Admissions of the School of Law, from each college or university attended whether credit was earned there or not. A cumulative transcript from the last school attended will not suffice.

(4) All students entering Loyola University for the first time must present a physician's certification of vaccination against smallpox within the twelve months prior to matriculation.

Applications should be submitted prior to May 1st and the file should be completed prior to June 15th. Ordinarily, applications submitted after May 1st or files completed after June 15th will be processed only on condition that space is available in the class.

Selection of applicants admitted to the School of Law is based on their academic records and law school admission test scores. Applicants selected must furnish a photograph, passport size, after registration. All transcripts and documents filed in connection with an application become the property of the University.

Students beginning the study of law will be admitted only in the Fall semester.

Students who have been in attendance at another law school and who are granted no advanced standing for any of the law work attempted at such other school shall be deemed beginning law students.

Advanced Standing Students who have successfully pursued a portion of their law course in an approved law school (that is, a school which is a member of the Association of American Law Schools or approved by the American Bar Association), and who are able to meet the entrance requirements of this School of Law, will receive credit for work successfully pursued in such approved school. The right is reserved to refuse such credit in whole or in part. At least one year's residence is required of advanced students or they will not be eligible for a degree. Therefore, credit given for work in another law school shall not exceed two years.

A student who has attended another law school, and who has been excluded for defective scholarship, or is on scholastic probation, is not eligible for admission to this School of Law.

Examinations and Special Regulations Examinations are given at the end of each semester. The alphabetical system of grading is used.

The quality of work indicated by these grades is as follows:

Grade	Quality of Work
A	Very Good
B	Good
C	Satisfactory
D	Unsatisfactory
F	Failure
AF	Absent from Examination

Except in cases of extreme personal hardship a student will be permitted to withdraw from a scheduled course only during the first month of the semester. However, a student may withdraw from the School of Law at any time prior to the examination period. In either case, notice of withdrawal must be given in writing and it is not effective until it is received in the Office of the Dean. In either case, no grade or credit of any kind will be given for the work in the course or courses.

In the case of a student who does not voluntarily withdraw but fails to appear for an examination the following action will be taken:

(1) Upon timely petition addressed to the Faculty, the student may where he presents evidence of sufficient cause, such as, personal illness, death in his immediate family or detention out of town by a failure in transportation facilities, be permitted to take a deferred examination. The record of the student will list the courses as "Incomplete." Such examination shall normally be completed the next time the students are examined in the course.

(2) In all other cases the record will be marked "AF". This grade will be considered as an "F" in determining student averages and will indicate non-attempt of the examination for required course purposes.

To be eligible for graduation a student must have earned 78 credits and a minimum quality point average of 2.00 on all work attempted. Students entering the School of Law (with or without advanced standing) for the first time in the fall semester of 1969 and thereafter must have earned 84 credits with the same minimum quality point average.

Quality credits are earned according to the following schedule:

Grade	Quality Credits per Credit Hour
A.....	4
B.....	3
C.....	2

Statement of Policy It is expected that a student should do satisfactory work and should therefore have a minimum average of 2.00 at all times. In the opinion of the faculty, a student who cannot achieve this minimum by the end of his first year should withdraw from the study of law. However, circumstances may occasionally prevent a capable student from earning a 2.00 average. For this reason, rather than a rule simply excluding students for failure to maintain a 2.00 average, the following rules have been adopted by the faculty.

Exclusions A Student shall be automatically excluded from the School of Law if (a) at any time after attempting eighteen (18) semester hours of law school work his over-all average is less than 1.75; or (b) at any time after attempting four semesters, full or part time, his over-all average is less than 1.90.

Readmissions An excluded student, except in cases of unusual hardship, shall be ineligible to apply for readmission until four (4) semesters after his last enrollment; however, a student excluded after having attempted five semesters, full or part time, shall not be subject to this rule.

Other Regulations No full-time student will be permitted to schedule more than fifteen hours of law work or work in another department of the University in any semester without special permission from the Dean of the School of Law. However, a student who is registered for a full schedule in either division may audit any course he has not scheduled. He should receive permission of the faculty member offering the course.

No full-time student will be permitted to schedule less than ten hours of law work in any one semester. No part-time student will be permitted to schedule less than six hours each semester unless it is impossible for him to choose that many from the courses that are offered.

A student whose work is unsatisfactory during any semester may be denied permission to carry a full schedule during the following semester.

Students registered in the School of Law will not be permitted to register for courses in any other school without special permission from the Dean of the School of Law. Permission will be granted only to upper-classmen in special instances. Even in those instances no one will be permitted to take more than three hours of work in another school while he is enrolled in the School of Law.

Fall semester grades will be announced to the students on the mid-semester date of the spring semester.

Tuition & Fees All students are required to pay full tuition, fees, etc., at the time of registration and on the days assigned. A student has not officially completed registration until having properly satisfied his financial obligations. This means that the obligation to pay attaches when the dean or adviser approves the schedule of subjects on the registration form executed by the student. If he does not complete his registration during the assigned time, the student must pay a late registration fee. Resident students are required to pay room and board on the day of registration.

The University reserves the right to change, with due notice, any of the expenses listed and to withhold statements of honorable dismissal, grade reports, transcript of record, diploma, etc., until all indebtedness to the University has been discharged or until satisfactory arrangements have been made with the Vice-President for Business and Finance. Also, no student will be allowed to register subsequently as long as his prior financial indebtedness has not been satisfied. Exceptions to regulations regarding University charges will be made only by the President of the University.

Students are encouraged to make payments by check, money order, etc., made payable to Loyola University. Cash transactions are discouraged.
